EDGEPOINT SWPs – MONEY NOW, MONEY LATER

Inasmuch as investing is about delaying immediate gratification for future gain, done right a systematic withdrawal plan (SWP) can offer investors both. Very simply, a SWP lets you automatically take money out of your investment on a regular basis. If that investment is growing, a SWP provides a disciplined way to meet your income needs while you continue to build wealth.

Example: You invested $100,000 on EdgePoint Global Portfolio's start date and immediately began redeeming $500 per month. Annually, this represented 6% of your original $100,000 investment.

Nine years later, on December 31, 2017, your Portfolio after paying taxes on your withdrawals was worth $280,945 and you ended up with $54,500 in your pocket.

Example assumes distributions paid in cash and taxed as follows: 49.53%; Canadian dividends: 33.82%; capital gains: 24.77%. Distributions were then used to pay taxes with the remainder reinvested in the portfolio.

ⁱ Cumulative return of capital is the difference between the amount withdrawn minus any capital gain/loss from the initial investment to the listed date.

ⁱⁱ Cumulative capital gain/loss is the amount withdrawn attributable to the portfolio's growth from the initial investment to the listed date, net of taxes.

Whether a SWP make sense for you depends on your personal financial circumstances, your age and risk tolerance. Your financial advisor can help you sort through your options and find the approach that works best for you.
